Subject: Regarding the request to obtain a long-term type D study visa to attend the classes for M.Sc in Economics of the Department of Economics and Statistics of the University of Siena.

Respected Sir/ Madam,

I, Mr. Sahil Beg holder of an Indian passport with passport number R3179675, is putting forward my application to obtain a long-term type D study visa to pursue my higher education in your country which has always been my dream study abroad destination. This letter herewith explains my motives and intention to seek the program mentioned above from Italy and my qualifications.

My academic and professional choices have been determined by the opportunities they present for the potential acceleration of my interests and the accumulation of related knowledge and skills. My journey to the core, foundational learnings about economics began when I opted for commerce with computer science in grade 12 and later, I delved deeper into the subject in my Bachelor of Commerce at Delhi University. I submerged myself deeper into subjects such as financial accounting, economics, corporate accounting, business mathematics, marketing, business administration, etc. At first, it took a while to grasp the topics, and as the course progressed, I evolved into a dedicated student of economics and finance. To put my theoretical knowledge to use, I even started analyzing how the Indian economy is working and what is causing fluctuations. During my second year of graduation, I was fortunate to receive an offer of employment from an e-commerce business organization, Flipkart. As a customer complaints handler, I joined the operating division where I comprehended the supply chain methods, communication with customers, and methods to improve grievance redressal. Here, I gained organizational skills, and people handling and learned how to overcome daily challenges. Throughout my graduation, my interest was inclined towards economics and policy-making and thus, I decided to pursue my master-level education in the field of economics, and fortunately, I got admission at MSc in Economics at Siena University which is a 2-year English taught program.

Italy is renowned for its robust and diverse economy, making it an ideal place to study economics. The country's economic diversity offers students a comprehensive understanding of economic theories and practices, providing a solid foundation for their future careers in economics. Additionally, studying in Italy can offer students the chance to learn about and experience the country's unique approach to economic planning and implementation, which can be influenced by factors such as population density, the effectiveness of the strategies, and the capabilities of institutions to execute developmental strategies. Furthermore, Italy is home to many renowned universities and institutions that specialize in the field of economics and public policy making, and these institutions are known for providing excellent resources and opportunities to excel in the field. One such top-notch institution is Siena University which has been nurturing students and delivering highly professional and capable economists and researchers to the world for more than a century. As an Indian student, this nation offers whatever I strive for, be it the atmosphere of possibilities. As I explored educational institutions throughout the globe, I found that Italy's cities with their aesthetic variety and higher education system are more student-friendly.

The course of MSc Economics at Siena University involves a coalition of four main subjects i.e., econometrics, macroeconomics, quantitative methods for economics, and microeconomics which will make me a multidisciplinary professional. Furthermore, I will develop an understanding of the economic problems prevailing across the globe, and knowledge of how to mitigate those problems through the knowledge of various disciplines integrated within contemporary economics and advanced economics. It will enable me to build strong communication and collaboration skills, allowing me to work effectively with scholars, researchers, and other professionals in the field.

I look forward to finding employment opportunities in India, my home country, dealing with interdisciplinary teams, and expanding my vocational abilities within an exciting and ambitious research and policymaking institution in India that has the highest standards. In the upcoming years, I envision myself as a researcher or economist responsible for planning, designing, and implementing plans for the development of the economic structure of a developing country like India as I wish to work at the Reserve Bank of India which is the main apex institution responsible for economic development of the country.
